Teaching Philosophy	I believe in teaching from the heart. It is a passion that derives from the joy of learning. I believe that learning takes place in a constructivist environment where one is actively engaged. Knowledge is socially constructed and collaboration is strongly encouraged in my classes. In a motivating fashion, I deliver lessons that challenge my students to "think out of the box." I believe that learning should be fun and I encourage my students to find their creativity and teaching style that will best serve students in the classroom. As teachers, we need to model our love for learning so that students may become lifelong learners. I strongly believe if you enjoy what you are doing, others will see and want to share in that experience. I believe teachers need to have the knowledge, skills and dispositions of a responsive professional and generous heart. Love teaching and it will love you right back!
