Teaching Philosophy	My philosophy of teaching evolved from many years of teaching at the elementary level. I find that teaching students at the university level to be very similar to teaching students at the elementary level. As I reflect on my beliefs regarding teaching and learning, I find that my goal as an instructor are threefold: <ul style="list-style-type: none">To promote positive learning;To spark learner enthusiasm for learning;And to provide content area instruction. To some my next statement may seem odd, but I believe that content area instruction is of secondary importance to my other two goals. I feel that creating a caring, positive learning environment in which a student is encouraged to share and collaborate is essential. In addition, I adamantly believe that learning can and should be fun, and I put this belief into practice every day in the courses I teach. I demonstrate that teachers can simultaneously demand quality work and have fun. As an instructor of pre-service teachers, I strive to demonstrate my enthusiasm for teaching to give my students a model of enthusiasm for the teaching profession. It is my hope that my love of teaching is reflected in my students' love of teaching.
Bio	Dawn is currently the assistant department head and an instructor in department of Curriculum and Instruction, and the director of the College of Education Instructional Materials Center. She began her tenure at the University of Louisiana at Lafayette in 2009 as an adjunct instructor and has been employed full-time since 2011. Dawn graduated with a B.S. in Elementary Education from Louisiana State University in Baton Rouge in 1995. Immediately following graduation, she began her teaching career as a fifth grade teacher in Crowley, Louisiana. For the next twelve years, she remained a classroom teacher teaching first, third, fourth and fifth grades. Dawn graduated with her Master's degree in Educational Technology from Northwestern State University and went on to obtain several certifications including a certification as a school librarian. These certifications allowed her to serve as school librarian in Acadia Parish for the next four years. When she is not teaching, Dawn enjoys spending time with her children, grandchildren, reading and gardening.
